El Cerrito tax is reborn

Amount to be fixed in June

By GORDON RADDUE
EL CERRITO — Against vigorous opposition from both within and without its ranks, the Council has taken the first step in establishing a general municipal services tax very like the one rejected in November. By a 3-2 margin, council members Margaret Collins and Howard Abel dissenting, the council Monday initially approved an ordinance which provides it with the authority to levy such a tax. The amount of the tax won't be determined until after budget deliberations in June. It could be less and it could be more than the $68.85 annual tax levied by Measure E, the one the voters turned down by a 5,368 to 4-

845 margin on Nov. 2. "If we're going to have a tax to maintain services it should be a tax adequate to do the job," said council member Richard Spellmann, whose motion to eliminate a provision from the ordinance setting a $68.85 limit per dwelling unit was upheld by split vote. Council member Abelson likened the council's action — imposing the tax after it had been rejected by the voters — to the state Legislature overturning the results of the gubernatorial election between George Deukmajian and Tom Bradley. "It seems to me elected officials should be responsive to the voice of the people," he said. Abelson offered a substitute mo-

Cars, garage, nice have to go

ALBANY — A trio of vintage automobiles which have been parked in a Talbot Avenue driveway for years, filling up with rain and providing a nesting place for mice, finally will be removed as a result of City Council action Monday. The council declared the cars and a severely dilapidated wooden garage housing a fourth car a public nuisance Monday after hearing city officials and neighbors describe the nuisances of 842 Talbot as nothing short of a mess. Council authorized the Fire, Police and Public Works departments to have the cars hauled off and the garage torn down. The city will put a lien on the house until the owner of the property, Gerald Connors, pays the clean-up. The action capped a running battle between Connors, who has defied repeated requests from city departments to clean up his driveway, yard and buildings to eliminate health and safety hazards as well as an eyesore. Last year, the city obtained a Superior Court order allowing workers to enter Connors' house to begin clearing out a four-foot-deep accumulation of rubbish. Technically, the order would have allowed removal of the cars as well, but the city has approached the matter cautiously because it involves private property rights. Under state law and city ordinance, the council had to determine that the cars were "inoperative" and a number of other findings before ordering their removal. Connors did not show up at the public hearing preceding council action on the matter Monday — even though he had requested the hearing. However, he is believed to have

Albany leads in language teaching

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — A teaching method developed in France has made the Albany school district's foreign language program one of the most successful on the East Bay. The method, referred to as the "St. Cloud" approach, has foreign language enrollments topping 52 percent of Albany High's student body. This compares very favorably with Richmond Unified School District's 27.5 percent and Berkeley Unified School District's 47 to 48 percent at the secondary school level. Albany's high percentage enrollments is in a district one mile square in size, with only six full-time and two part-time instructors. Richard Rosenquist, assistant superintendent at Albany Unified School District, attributes the success to several factors: "The key to our program has been both its cohesiveness system-wide and the quality of our middle school program," Rosenquist said. "Indeed, Albany is one of the few districts in the state which require that every single student in the 7th grade take a foreign language — either French or Spanish. Berkeley and Richmond, by contrast, have absolutely no foreign language requirements at any level. "The first concern we have is to teach a practicable skill," said Joanne Commanday, a French teacher at the Middle School. "What we are trying to accomplish is to teach students how to communicate — how to speak," said Pat Moore, who also teaches French but at the high school. "To do this you have to be able to think in a foreign language." The St. Cloud method is designed to do just that: "It is an audio visual approach using film strips and a tape recorder," Moore said. "We use absolutely no English in our classes. "Our goal is to have students think in the foreign language. They shouldn't have to constantly refer back to the mother tongue." It was just this philosophy which was the driving force behind St. Cloud's development in the late 1950s and early 1960s. "The Ecole St. Cloud in Paris was faced with the challenge of teaching French to adults from 15 to 20 non-French-speaking countries," said Commanday. "The French government backed the

EL CERRITO — This city calls itself the City of Homes. It has been managed carefully over the years to keep taxes low. El Cerrito taxes always have been lower than the other cities in the area, including Richmond and Albany. At the same time, industry was not encouraged at all, nor business especially encouraged. The city's residents always have opposed increased density. This was fine as long as the property tax remained adequate for services; but with the passage of Proposition

13, El Cerrito has become a city with real financial difficulties, much more so than cities with racetracks or oil refineries. Sales tax would help, but the economy literally has halted any new shopping plaza development or any other development. This month there were two buckets in the city manager's office and six in the finance director's office catching the rain because we have not been able to afford a new roof. All the city clubhouses need new roofs. The library has needed reroofing for two years with water leakage, damage to books, furnishings, and interior.

Henry Kruse: blind activist

Teacher-lawyer helps people be independent

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — Henry Kruse may not be able to read the agenda for City Council meetings, but he comes to the weekly Monday night sessions at least as prepared as his fellow council members. Kruse's method is simple: he hires someone to read aloud to him. His Saturday mornings are devoted to going over all the material in the council packet for the next meeting. It's a method he has used all his life, although his first reader was unpaid. "I trained my mother, who was the best reader I ever had," he recalled recently. "Of course," he added with a mischievous smile, "she would say she trained me." Kruse, 57, has been legally blind since birth. He lost the bit of sight he once had at the age of 18. He relies on his legs and a white cane to get around. He reads books in Braille. He can touch-type and do math on an abacus. He used to practice law, and now serves as a teacher — not to mention an encouraging example for students — at the state-run Orientation Center for the Blind in Albany. Kruse came to California from his home state of New Jersey in 1960 to join the faculty of the Orientation Center, then in Oakland. He moved to Albany when the school relocated there in 1964. He was elected to the Albany City Council last April, finishing second in a field of five candidates. Although Kruse has been active in promoting the rights of the blind for four decades, he sought to avoid making his blindness an issue in that campaign.

As he explained in an interview in his spartan office, "You never try to get a job on the basis of what you can't do."

He gives the same advice to his students at the Orientation Center — many of them people blinded in adulthood. "You never ask: 'Do you have a job for a blind

"We expect people to go home and pick up their lives and live them essentially the same way they would live them if they were able to see."

man?" You ask: 'Do you have a job for a person who can do such-and-such,' " he said.

On the other hand, he also tells students not to deny their blindness. "There are times when you shouldn't mention it," he said, "but you shouldn't be ashamed of it. Like your sex or your color or your height — you are what you are."

Kruse eschews terms like "visually handicapped" or "visually impaired," preferring to call a spade a spade. He confronts the problem realistically, saying, "I can't think of any job where it wouldn't be a help to be able to see."

However, he also believes there is no job a blind person can't do — putting aside wisecracks such as, "You

ABAG eyes toxic spill master plan

A proposed 76-point plan for dealing with hazardous materials will be aired today during a public "discussion" that is considered a dress rehearsal for a formal public hearing later in the month.

"We are not sure what kind of turnout there will be at this week's meeting," said Lorene Jackson, staff member of the Association of Bay Area Governments.

The preview session, beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the Oakland Main Public Library, will delve into the plan prepared over a year's time by an ABAG Hazardous Spills Task Force.

The wide-ranging proposals urge Bay Area counties to adopt new programs requiring limited disclosure by private industries of information on hazardous wastes. Recommended is creation of emergency response teams in Contra Costa and several other counties to deal with dangerous spills.

While today's session may be quiet, a public hearing on Jan. 20 is expected to attract wide comment from numerous groups and individuals, according to Jackson who is the task force project manager. Beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the BART board room at 800 Madison Street, Oakland, the hearing will include speakers representing mayors' organizations in several Bay Area counties.

It is not known whether private industries involved in hazardous materials storage and transportation will attend either session.

Many companies do not appear to favor complete disclosure of information, she said, but some have offered to provide information useful in the event of a spill.

This would include types and locations of stored materials, along with identification and means of contacting key personnel who can provide assistance at the time of a spill.

The task force recently held a meeting at Maple Hall, San Pablo, where its position on the sensitive question of disclosure was aired. The result was that the group favors private industry disclosure of information to unspecified public agencies.

Whether each county should consider more stringent laws that would require disclosure to the general public was described by the task force as a "political question" which was left up to each county.

wouldn't want to hire a blind truck driver," which he considers "gratuitous foolishness."

For example, there is no reason a trucker who becomes blind cannot set up his own company and hire others to drive the rigs, he said.

Kruse's job at the Orientation Center is teaching "business practices," which he described as "everything from don't sign a contract before it's read to you to methods of marketing debenture bonds."

Actually, his work involves far more. His conversational classes are part of an intensive experience designed to help blind people cope with and adapt to their blindness, both physically and psychologically.

In a physical sense, the center teaches skills ranging from how to walk with a cane to typing or cooking, skills aimed at "putting people where they would be if they could see," Kruse said.

From a psychological point of view, it tries to give students a sense of confidence and worth. "The point is to relieve people of dependency on an agency for the blind for the rest of their lives," he said.

"The traditional agency for the blind welcomes a person for life. We expect people to go home and pick up their lives and live them essentially the same way they would live them if they were able to see."

The Orientation Center's live-in program enrolls students from all over California, and the typical stay lasts five to 12 months. "It's a little bit like going to the hospital," Kruse said. "You expect to be cured and sent home, and then you're a whole and free and independent person again."

Kruse himself exudes the kind of self-confidence he tries to instill in his students, but in fact he too was plagued by doubts and insecurity for many years. "When I was in college and law school," he acknowledged, "I was desperately afraid that I wouldn't be able to make a living."

Because Kruse had a bit of sight until his senior year in high school, he and his family did not even admit to his blindness for a long time. "I just had bad eyes; I couldn't see too well," was how they put it.

He remembers the very day he faced up to the matter. He just had gotten a "talking book machine" which played records of readings from books, and was demonstrating it to his grandmother, a German immigrant. In German, she told him, "But thou art not blind," and he answered, also in German, "But I am."

Kruse compares that recognition to a religious conversion: "You've been building up to it for a long time, but you remember the incident when it happens."

Growing up in New Jersey, Kruse attended regular public schools, which he now thinks was probably a mistake. For one thing, it meant that he didn't learn Braille until he was a young adult. For another, it taught him how to hoodwink teachers into believing he was learning as much as his classmates.

"I know that every blind student in a class of sighted students does a lot of faking and a lot of swindling of teachers. I know all those tricks," he said. "I was clever enough to get away with stuff, and that was bad."

Kruse said his mother, a schoolteacher, helped him a great deal in his studies; while his father, a "self-made man," saw to it that he got his share of opportunities.

He attended college at Drew University in Madison, New Jersey, and went on to law school at Rutgers on the promise of a job from a lawyer he knew.

That lawyer hired Kruse after graduation, and Kruse later opened his own office. He also had a part-time job with the Legal Aid Society.

"I worked on my own simply because very few firms wanted to risk a blind lawyer," he said.

Kruse became involved with organizational efforts on behalf of the blind as a high school senior when he joined the New Jersey Blindmen's Association. He learned to use a cane at a seaside camp run by the association which offered blind people free two-week vacations.

Later he became a member of the National Federation of the Blind. While working on a committee for that organization's national convention, he met the head of the Orientation Center for the Blind, who invited him to come to California to teach.

"That was about at a time in my life when I thought, hey, maybe I should be looking at something else," Kruse said. "And I had often thought that if I could find an agency serving blind people for which I had any respect, I would like to work there. Quite frankly, I didn't like most of the institutions for the blind."

Kruse lives in an apartment about half a mile from the center, and walks to and from work. "My father was a commuting slave," he observed. "That's no way to live."

After living in Albany for eight years, Kruse decided to try for a City Council seat at the suggestion of friends in the Democratic Party.

It was not his first political campaign. His first was when his brother put his name on the primary ballot for a New Jersey borough council post. He lost, but made a surprisingly strong showing for an unknown Democrat in a Republican stronghold.

He subsequently made two tries for the New Jersey state legislature, again running as a Democrat in a Republican area. "I refer to it the way most politicians refer to a defeat: as a moral victory," he said, "because I was beaten by less than two-to-one instead of more than two-to-one."

Kruse entered the Albany City Council race despite a friend's warning that, "It's the dumbest thing you could ever do."

Initially, he felt sure he would come out last. But his campaign efforts, conducted mainly by mail, had made his name a household word by election day.

Kruse acknowledged that the council job is not exactly what he expected. "I thought you get elected and you run the city," he said. "You don't. You get elected and then you do what the county, state and federal government tell you to do. We are so dependent on them for funds and whatnot that we have to do what they want."

However, the experience has not dulled his interest in council work; he already is planning to run for a second term in 1986.

Mail bag

'I don't recycle, why should I pay for it?'

I don't recycle, so why should I pay for it?" "It's a loser — you people should end it!" "The City shouldn't compete with private business."

These, and other arguments in opposition to our city recycling program, have been heard again and again at City Hall. Why then did El Cerrito's Council vote a surcharge on the garbage bill to support EColgy? Let's review the facts.

The garbage stream from our homes has two components. One part, containing food wastes, garden clippings and plastics, cannot be recycled or converted to energy in this area; it makes up about three fourths of the total garbage. The remaining one fourth contains metals, papers, magazines, boxes and glass which can be recycled.

Through the years the City has authorized East Bay Sanitary (the garbage collector) to remove household garbage and dump it in Richmond. That dump site is rapidly filling and by the end of the century, if not sooner, it will be closed. At that time, unless a waste-to-energy plant is available, East Bay Sanitary may have to haul our garbage between 50 and 300 miles to new as-yet undesignated dump sites. Such a haul will increase our garbage bill by many dollars a month. It is, therefore, important for all of us to minimize the amount of fill sent to Richmond — to postpone the day when that site is closed.

The City Council believes that recycling has a key role in keeping overall garbage rates down. By recycling one fourth of our garbage (170 tons/month), we extend the useful life of the Richmond dump. We also reduce the monthly bill from East Bay Sanitary. That is one reason we now enjoy the lowest garbage rates in this area. It must be clear that no garbage company could collect and haul 170 tons per month of additional waste from El Cerrito. Richmond free of cost. Our Environmental Quality Commission, a citizen's group, has made a detailed study of the cost factors; its report indicates that today's recycling saves every home in the City as much as eight cents per month. It is an undeniable fact that the "fee" charged by Richmond on a weight basis, if applied to our recyclables, would amount to twenty cents per ton each month.

The savings I have referred to have not reverted to the garbage collector; they are in your pocket now. When you recycle or not you are benefiting from the efforts of those who do. It is interesting to note that had the City asked the garbage collector for the equivalent of the "ping fee" through the years, EColgy would be a profit center in our City.

EColgy is a money loser only because City government chose to return all of the benefits of reduced garbage collection to our residents, rather than keeping a portion balance recycling costs! Now, because the State has usurped our traditional income, El Cerrito must ask home to return a portion of the savings raised by recycling. Nevertheless, even non recyclers will be paying less if they would if recycling were ended. Surely no one can object to spending 40 cents per month if that will save of up to 86 cents each month.

One more point is important. We have joined together as a city of 22,000 people for our mutual good. We have many city services which are extremely important to us but are unused by others. We don't all use our parks, recreation programs, the swimming pool, the Van Gogh Open House, the after-school playground program, our recusatator service or victim's assistance program. don't all have equally good street lighting, street maintenance or street trees.

I don't know if there is a single service that would be two-thirds vote for continuation, but that's not the point. The point is that together we have been able to provide a wide range of services, in an economical manner, so that each of us can benefit in one way or another. To quote Donne: "no man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main."

By working together we have provided services for none of us individually could have obtained. Your Council is constantly evaluating these services so as to provide equity, to meet pressing needs, and to minimize overall costs. The Council has found that EColgy meets these requirements.

Let's clean it up!

Dear Fellow Citizens:

What do you say we get together on the morning of Jan. 8 and volunteer to clean up an unsightly area in Albany?

The debris littered area is the south side of Marin Avenue stretching from the corner of Marin and San Pablo to the Middle School.

Let's meet at 9 a.m. in front of City Hall. Wear gloves and a sunshade and bring a few garbage can liners, and a stick to pick up debris. We'll work for an hour or so.

Thanks,
Dario Meniketti

There is no money budgeted for this now or in the long term.

Much fuss has been made by the public since the election over loss of staff and, hence, ability to enforce the tree and view ordinance. We have continuous complaints about the turning off of street lights. The public complains and expects exactly the response and maintenance as before Proposition 13, with greatly reduced personnel. And there is no money in sight for these services or capital improvements.

Good stewardship to our constituents, to me, means that we do not let city facilities and staff deteriorate to the point of having to begin again.

Many of our streets are in very sad condition (for example, Terrace Drive from top to bottom); patching does not solve the problem (it just covers it temporarily). The floor at the Community Center was to have been refinished four years ago. The Police Department has postponed needed equipment for two years; in fact, there is a standing joke about the condition of the Chief's car. The Fire Department is working with Richmond in joint response and should have comparable firefighter pay but there is no money.

The street sweeper program has been cancelled for lack of a functioning sweeper. Any funds for emergency fire equipment, like a new pumper ($85,000 to $140,000), have been eliminated. The annual tree-trimming program is cancelled from now on. Any general equipment replacement (vehicles, even lawn mowers) have been stopped.

If we want El Cerrito to continue as a place in which we are proud to live, the City Council must move now. We have no relief in sight before or after December 1984.

The State Legislature has announced its intention to reduce what subventions are left by another $125,000, added to the $500,000 they kept this year. There is no way to provide something for nothing. We can vote to nickel-and-dime the voters with assessment districts for lighting and street maintenance, but that would not solve police and fire problems, or equipment replacement, etc. or other critical needs.

We are blessed in El Cerrito with competent, hard-working staff, morale is understandably at an all time low. The staff is seriously overworked.

The override tax was a close vote to believe with two more months educate the public by door-to-door canvassing, it would have passed. The City Council is the last resort pass the override which will only store last year's service.

The action now would only have effect in January 1984 after a council election in November. Only change in the method of voting the override tax should be to include all apartments in the city.

The tax, as stated during the member election, will be specific for police and fire services, street lighting, park and street tree maintenance, children and senior services and view maintenance. A sunset clause will be included, limiting tax to four years, unless voted up by another council.

It is the duty of a city council to protect the investment in assets service components made over years by the people of El Cerrito tion that would restrict revenue to be derived from the tax to police and fire services, but it failed by a 3-2 margin.

Acting City Attorney William T. Bullard pointed out that such a tax would be of a "special" rather than general nature and therefore be subject to a referendum.

Leading opposition to the ordinance from the audience was Gregg Howe, who said that for the council to pass the tax "in direct contradiction to a vote of the people suggests that the council has lost touch with the very idea of democratic representation."

"It seems to me," said Howe, "that the issue of this tax has been discussed at length and the verdict of the people heard. What remains now is quite a different issue, a much more important issue — does this council recognize any accountability whatsoever to the people of El Cerrito?"

Howe disagreed with Mayor Jean Siri's expressed opinion that the November override tax would have passed had its supporters had two more months to educate the public by door-to-door canvassing, stating that the issue received "extensive coverage in the press."

Several others aired strong opinions against the tax, but the council majority wasn't without its audience support, the most vocally in favor being local senior leader Art Schroeder, who said the tax was necessary "to give us a livable city."

The second and final reading of the ordinance is scheduled for the Jan. 17 meeting.

Following a recess after the vote, the council reaffirmed its policy statement it had made in connection with Measure E, with one addition. Besides specifying that the revenue would be used for police and fire services, street lighting, park and street tree maintenance, children's and senior services and street maintenance, "restoration of prudent reserves" was added to the priority list.

All last night's action did, in effect, was to start the mechanism toward the establishment of a municipal services tax.

What it did, in fact, was to rekindle a controversy that could stay hot until November, when two of the council members — James Allen Jr. and Collins stand for re-election.

The report included two "examples" of laws requiring complete disclosure, one prepared by the state and the other by proponents in Santa Clara County.

In Contra Costa, a hazardous material task force has been created by the board of supervisors, with recommendations forthcoming in the near future.

The controversy over this issue began this year when industries complained that complete disclosure would reveal valuable trade secrets to rival firms.

The task force's overall report was reviewed in San Pablo. There are 76 recommendations relating to assessment of risks, spill prevention, spill response, training of personnel, legal liability of those who cause spills, legal moves against violators of regulations, financing of recommended programs and future plans.

"Substantially more spills were recorded for Contra Costa County during 1980 than for any other county in the area," said the report. Most of the incidents, it said, occurred in the industrialized strip between Richmond and Martinez, especially in the Richmond area.

The Contra Costa Mayors Conference will get into the act during a meeting this week and again on Feb. 3. Conference members will hear about local plans during a regular meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Contra Costa Country Club, Pleasant Hill. Speaker will be County Supervisor Tom Torlakson.

The conference will consider the ABAG plan at its meeting Feb. 3.

Most mayors conference group other Bay Area counties will review the plan before the Jan. 20 meeting by ABAG.

The entire process is leading consideration of final plan adopted by the ABAG executive board on 17 in Emeryville.

gram. It was eventually extended to teach other languages.

The sequence is not unlike a developing theatrical piece: "A dramatic feeling is imparted," Commanday explained. "The teacher is, in effect, on the stage. The students are a part of it, going on in the film strips as tapes."

It's a little bit like a soap opera — an actual story," Moore said. "Scenes take place in common locales such as a skating rink, a post office, or a hotel."

The film strips which Albany French classes from 1970 to 1976 had a unique cultural flavor. The drawings were based on the culture of Senegal, in French West Africa.

Grand and writing are introduced later on," said Moore. "After you learn to think in a foreign language that reading and writing more naturally follow."

Our approach differs from other, more traditional audio-visual techniques in one vital aspect," said Commanday. "Audio techniques are usually very rigid. I would describe ours as 'fluid'."

We believe that the most effective growth in a foreign language occurs when students are given the responsibility for their own learning — by pattern recognition through analogy."

This aspect of the program is used to teach the more complicated aspects of the program, such as grammar:

"The film strips are initially a crutch," Commanday said. "Elements in the strip are then combined with elements of real life. Descriptions of scenes, for instance, are rendered in the third person."

This is referred to as "transposition." Commanday said a good transposition will teach students conjugations and the other elements of grammar.

The French text, "Voie et Image," has analyzed, by computer, the frequency of certain aspects of language:

"The approach has found and uses the 'cluster' of the most commonly used words in the language," Commanday said. "The first word in the French text is 'Voila!'"

The method came to the district in 1964, even before it was published. The French text and film strips have gone through one major revision. The Spanish has not.

"I believe that it is in the national interest to promote foreign language instruction," Rosenquist said. "For business it is vital. In California it is accentuated by the fact that we are a coastal community."

Other educators also see a trend of increased emphasis in foreign language instruction:

"I anticipate that the enrollment in the foreign language program in the two Berkeley junior high schools will top 50 percent in the next two years," said Beverly Maimoni, director of instruction at the Berkeley Unified School District. "This comes from a greater regard for the academic strengths."

Commanday agrees: "Society will have to learn foreign languages for practical purposes. But language learning may become targeted for the specific purpose intended. The pressures are going to come especially through business."

"We are looking at other materials now," Commanday said. "One, which a representative of the French government showed us, is more in step with the times. It is extremely flexible and practical."

The new text called "Archipel" is, at this point, only being considered for adoption by the Albany schools. Only the first two of its seven units must be taught in order. The balance are targeted to specific audiences with specific needs.

"Recently I was paid $50 a day to teach French to some businessmen who had to deal with people from the Belgian Congo," Commanday said.

"Sooner or later more emphasis will have to come from government. We must have people who can function in various languages — not people who take six-week concentrated refresher courses at the age of 35."

Writer's cramp

Clothes make the woman

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

I enjoy watching the ways in which my daughters are developing a sense of personal style. I notice, for instance, that one chooses shirts with V-necks and the other likes tops that are long enough to tuck in. That one also has a marked preference for leg o'mutton sleeves.

There's nothing hard and fast about this, since they lend each other clothes all the time. But I make a mental note of each quirk as it emerges; this kind of information is useful at gift-giving time.

When I was growing up, there were a lot more rules governing appropriate attire than there are now. As a result, many of my own choices were either in accordance with, or in defiance of, those rules, and it took me a lot longer than it seems to be taking my kids, to develop some kind of personal style.

I ran into one of the big rules — the one about Nice Girls — when I was about 11. When I dressed for school one day in a black bra under a sheer white nylon blouse, my mother blocked the door.

I remember explaining that I thought the bit of black visible under the frilly white top was sort of neat. My mother could have told me she thought it looked ugly, which it undoubtedly did. Instead she told me that Nice Girls didn't dress that way.

I wasn't so sure I really wanted to be a Nice Girl, but it was clear that this was not the issue to make a stand on. Muttering about oppression, I changed to a white bra and the required whole slip.

The Nylon Blouse Episode occurred after we had finally stopped the Great Stocking Wars. Like all girls of my generation, I was not permitted to wear pants to school. Dancers' tights were not yet available for children, so throughout elementary school, I spent the winter resisting the awful full-length cotton stockings we wore for warmth.

To hold up the stockings, we used garter belts, annoying contraptions whose garters would snap or open at the slightest provocation. Since most of us in the primary grades lacked hips, sometimes the garter belt had to be held up with suspenders. The school hardly had to make any rules about what activities were appropriate for girls; as encumbered as we were, it's amazing we were able to walk!

Since we had to wear skirts, in the winter our bare legs would have been quite blue by the time we got to school.

Not that I cared; blue legs were infinitely preferable to those long ugly stockings.

"Flesh-colored," they were called. Actually, they were beige, which is not the color of my flesh, and the non-Caucasian little girls who couldn't argue their way out of them wore them too.

What I dreaded most of all was an accident on the playground, for a hole in the stocking was a source of embarrassment and teasing. And no matter how carefully a hole was darned, it always showed.

My mother used to suggest I wear colored ankle socks over the stockings.

"Then no one will even notice that you have the stockings on," she said.

Even at the age of six, I knew that anybody with an IQ in double digits could tell the difference between heavy cotton stockings and bare legs.

By the time I was 10, my fear of social stigma was greater than my fear of my mother's wrath, so I began removing the stockings after I left the house and substituting the knee socks I had stuck in my pocket. I did not get pneumonia, and eventually my mother bowed to the inevitable.

By the time I reached high school, the embarrassment factor was at its peak. The most significant thing about my wardrobe was that it looked like everybody else's.

White bucks replaced saddle shoes. I rolled my crinolines and horsehair slips carefully each night so they would stick out at the proper angle under my circle skirt with the appliqued poodle. When I dressed up, I added a strand of pearls to my pleated skirt and matching cardigan and pull-over sweater. In short, I devoted a considerable amount of energy to not standing out in a crowd.

Eventually I learned to rely less on what Others were wearing and more on what I thought was comfortable and appropriate. In fact, things have come so far that this winter I am wearing a knitted cap, something I once considered a fate worse than death.

My daughters, who tell me the cap looks good, would sooner have their heads freeze than wear hats. They say a hat will mess up their hair or make them look funny.

I try not to nag them about wearing hats, because I do, after all, understand. They don't have to explain anything to the former embarrassment queen.

Albany deals with an old eyesore

responded in the form of an anonymous letter, read out loud at the hearing by city Administrative Officer William Haden, in which he said his vehicles are duly registered and complained that a police sergeant living across the street also keeps an old car outside.

Haden said at least two of the cars, a 1960 Plymouth and a 1960 De Soto, were registered on Dec. 13, two weeks after Connors got notice that the city wanted to remove them.

He added that the complaint about a car across the street seemed unfounded, saying, "I've looked at Sergeant Harris' house and I didn't see an abandoned vehicle, and certainly not one as abandoned as these vehicles."

Neighbors said Connors has not actually lived in the Talbot Avenue house for a couple of years, and City Attorney Robert Zweben said he makes himself conveniently unavailable when the city wants to find him.

A tall, elderly but strong man, Connors used to be known for making nightly forays to El Cerrito Plaza to rummage through trash bins, according to one neighbor. His last known address is the home of a sister in Albany.

Connors will be notified by certified letter that he has five days to remove the autos and garage himself. In addition, Fire Chief Horace "Mike" Koepke said he will carry around notice of the council decision in case he bumps into Connors on the street.

One of the neighbors testifying at the hearing, former council member Anne Rotrammel, said the cars have not been moved for the four years she has owned the property a few houses away.

She said other residents generally are tolerant of individual lifestyles, "but this goes beyond anything that can be reasonably tolerated."

Another neighbor, Ed Howe, who has lived on the street 15 years, remembered how the cars had been retired one by one. "The Plymouth was the last one that was running, and that was five years ago," he said.

Haden described the cars as "packed with debris and mice droppings." The garage, he said, is in danger of collapsing on a swing set in the adjacent property lot.

Public Works Director Robert Guletz added that rats and mice have chewed away at the car seats and moss and grass are growing on the car panels as well as the unpaved driveway underneath.

Fire has broken out in the garage roof twice. "The firemen came too soon,"

Pot luck with Olga Bier

A post-holiday pause

Quiche me quick

Maybe you called it a cheese custard pie back before French terminology was so prevalent in our home kitchens. Maybe you called it a bacon-onion tart. Whatever it was known as then, it's a quiche now and still tasty as ever.

Basically, it's a pastry shell filled with a savory egg and cream custard to which various other ingredients are added for distinction. No doubt the most famous is the Quiche Lorraine (named for the district in France, near Germany), which is made with cheese and ham and bacon.

The nice thing about a quiche is that it is light and clean tasting. It makes a refreshing change to the heavier and richer meals of the holidays which perhaps you may have been enjoying too much lately.

Served hot with a green salad and fruit, quiche makes a good entree for luncheon or a light supper. Serve it cold, cut in little squares, and it is a marvelous appetizer. Quiche can be made in a pie pan or as individual tarts, but it is especially nice in a quiche pan which has low and straight sides with a fluted rim. If you have a flan ring, that's very good too. No more soggy centers.

As with a dessert custard pie, quiche is prepared in an unbaked shell and baked until the custard filling is set. However, one of the most frequently asked questions I get concerns a soggy crust in the center. There is an easy remedy to that.

After you have made the crust and shaped it into the pan, bake it unfilled for 10 minutes before filling it with the egg mixture. That will set the shell. You can even seal it further by then painting the shell with beaten egg and sprinkling a bit of grated cheese on it and baking briefly a little more.

If you once produce the classic Quiche Lorraine and understand the basic procedure, you can confidently vary your flavorings and fillings to suit your fancy. Add leftover diced meats or seafood or vegetables, experiment with some new herbs and create your own new quiche. The parenthetical notes which are included in the recipe following are meant to encourage you to fly on your own.

Quiche Lorraine

Pastry:
1 1/4 c. flour
1/2 c. shortening or unsalted butter
2-3 T. cold water
Pinch of salt

Measure the salt and flour into a bowl and toss. Cut in the shortening until it is like coarse meal. Add the water 1 T. at a time until the mixture can be rolled into a ball. Wrap in plastic and chill.

Filling:
6 or more slices of bacon, cut into 1/4 inch strips cross-wise and fried until crisp.

Drain well on paper towels and set aside. (Every recipe I have seen has you fry the bacon and then crumble it. Forget that. Just cut it up first and it all comes out evenly crisp when it is fried.)

In a bowl, whip together 4 eggs and 2 c. of cream (I have used anything from whipping cream and half and half to non-fat milk on special occasions and they all work; the richness of flavor varies, of course.)

Add a sprinkling of salt to suit your taste and a dash of pepper (white is nice). Then add 1/4 lb. (1 c.) shredded Swiss, Gruyere, or Emmentaler cheese. (For adventure, try some Roquefort for half of the cheese measure. Good old cheddar with a blob of mustard is another idea.)

After you roll out the chilled dough and make your crust, don't forget to prebake it for 10 minutes at 400 degrees to set it. (Be sure to line inside the crust with foil or parchment and pour some raw rice or beans in it for this baking. That will keep your shell nice and flat and assure you that you won't have a soggy middle when you fill and bake the custard later.)

After the setting of the shell, remove the rice or beans and foil, of course, and spread the crumbled bacon, thawed and drained, and some sautéed onions and garlic. Try feta cheese with this one—about 1/2 c.)

3. Brown a pound of sausage, drain, and substitute for the bacon.

4. Remember this one for spring: add some diagonally cut asparagus that has been blanched or steamed 3-5 minutes.

5. To the basic quiche, add 1/2 lb. of cooked, deveined shrimp and a dash of nutmeg.

Some good variations:

Reminder for the new year

Nutritionists have expressed concern over the lack of support or emphasis given by the current administration for the nutritional guidelines which were developed to lead the nation into better health and well-being. On a recent Face the Nation telecast, Dr. Jean Mayer, president of Tufts University and one of the best known and respected nutritionists in the world, reminded us all to review our diets and remember to eat less sweets and salt and eat more fresh fruits, grains, and vegetables.

Dr. Mayer feels our nation of obese and overly fed people need constant attention and encouragement towards more exercise and better nutrition. It is so hard to change one's habits, but with the irrefutable evidence of our national need to "shape up" our bodies and our menus, maybe if I nag you a bit (and thus nag myself) we can help each other towards a healthier and happier 1983. Cheers!

LET'S TALK IT OVER
with Odd E. Haugen
People outgrow their residences just as children outgrow clothing. As the size of the family changes, the home becomes too small for Mom, Dad and several active children or two large for just Mom and Dad after the children have moved away into homes of their own. The needs of the family change but the house stays the same size. Some people are reluctant to sell their homes and find more suitable residences because the value has increased so much that they fear the tax consequences. The tax laws now provide that no tax need be paid if the proceeds from sale are reinvested in a new residence within one year. Let us explain how you can enjoy a home perfectly suited to the size and needs of your family without paying a tax on the sale of your present home. Call or stop in so we can "Talk It Over" with you.

ALBANY

Albany police report the following incidents for the week ending January 2:

December 27

- A Portland Avenue resident reported that vandals shattered a ground floor window in her home, and uttered obscene, anti-Semitic comments as they left.

December 29

- Valerie Coleman, 28, of Emeryville was arrested for allegedly trying to use a stolen and forged check to buy liquor at the Liquor Barn on San Pablo Avenue.

December 30

- Maurice "T" Jones, 18, of Berkeley was arrested on drunk driving charge after leaving the Albany Bowl.

- Michael Sanches, 20, of Berkeley and Stephen Laverdure, 23, of Albany were arrested on suspicion of shoplifting at the Liquor Barn. Police said an officer observed Sanches put a bottle of liquor under his coat and then replace it on the shelf while Laverdure was distracting a clerk, and that another bottle was found under Sanches' coat after the pair left the store.

December 31

- Leonore James Audio, 37, an Albany resident who lists his occupation as bartender, was booked on charges of public intoxication, drunk driving and resisting arrest.
- Jesse Glenn Jacobs, 23, of Richmond was arrested near the Gateview complex on a drunk driving charge. He also was found to be the subject of an outstanding San Francisco warrant for receiving stolen property.
- An Albany resident reported that on December 29 his bass guitar had been stolen from his car, which was parked unlocked on Solano Avenue.

- Albany police recorded 10 adult arrests for the week.

EL CERRITO

El Cerrito police report the following incidents for the week ending December 2:

December 28

- El Cerrito Lumber on San Pablo Avenue reported the theft of 1,600 feet of redwood worth $1,600. The wood had disappeared sometime over the previous week. On December 29, the lumberyard reported a second theft of 2,000 feet of redwood lumber worth $1,700.

- A 12-year-old El Cerrito boy surrendered his $300 bicycle to another youngster who pulled a knife on him in Fairmont Park and demanded the bike.

December 29

- James Payne, 42, of El Cerrito, was arrested on a drunk driving charge after being involved in an accident at the intersection of Portola and Richmond. Payne evidently was not at fault in the accident, however; police said the second driver had failed to yield the right-of-way at a stop sign.

- A Richmond woman was the latest victim in a string of purse snatchings which have occurred in the same area of town over the past several weeks. She lost $300 when a young man grabbed her purse while she was walking at Creely and 55th Street.

December 31

- Radio Shack lost $1,000 to a pair of robbers. Police said the two men entered the store in the afternoon and one of them threatened a clerk by simulating a weapon inside a paper bag.

January 1

- Alvester Hogan, 20, of Berkeley was arrested on a drunk driving charge after being involved in a collision at Schmidt and San Pablo.

January 2

- Josephine Thibaux, 34, of Kensington was arrested on shoplifting charges after she allegedly tried to stuff $285 worth of clothes into a bag at Capwell's.
- Capwell's also reported that a man shoplifter had fled with 20 men's shirts worth a total of $480.
- El Cerrito police recorded a total of 15 adult arrests for the week.

Lecture series begins on aging parents

THOUSAND OAKS — "Aging Parents: Challenges and Opportunities" is the title for a free series of lectures in January sponsored by Epworth United Methodist Church.

The series is open to all interested persons in the community. The dates are Jan. 10, 17, 24 and 31 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the church, 1953 Hopkins St., Berkeley.

The leader of this series is Jean Benward, a clinical social worker. Benward has a master's degree from Columbia University and over 10 years of experience as a therapist. Her training also includes post-graduate work in a number of areas, including death and dying; illness; hypnosis/relaxation techniques; family therapy; abused children; behavior modification theory; abuse treatment; and non-western healing theories.

Benward is now in private practice in Oakland and said she chose to lead classes on the subject of aging parents because so many persons have sought help either as aging parents or as preparation for their own late years.

She said her interest in meeting with the families of elderly persons stemmed initially from her observations about her own personal reactions to her parents' aging.

The Adult Education Committee at the Epworth church planned this series. Free-will offering will be taken to help with expenses. For more information, call the church office between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. — 524-2920.
